Lemon Grove resident named vice-chairman of Metropolitan Water District Board

Three officers on Metropolitan Water District's board of directors-- two vice-chairmen and a secretary-- were elected yesterday to serve two-year terms beginning January 1. Chairmen for six of the board's committees were also named, and three members of the executive committee were elected.

Kenneth H. Witt, of Brea and Harry Griffen of Lemon Grove were elected as vice-chairmen, and John Killefer Newport Beach was elected as secretary of the 51-member board.

M. Roy Knauf, Jr. of Yorba Linda and Leonis C. Malburg, of Vernon were appointed to their first two-year terms as chairman and vice-chairman of the board's finance and insurance committee.

A. MacNeil Stelle of Calabasas, was named chairman of the organization and personnel committee. Ida Frances Lowry of Long Beach was reappointed as vice-chair.

Charles D. Barker of San

Pedro, presently vice-chairman of the water problems committee was appointed chairman. Carl M. Kymla of Corona del Mar, will succeed Barker as vice-chairman.

As the drought moves into a fifth consecutive year, Southern California's largest water agency authorized the first mandatory regional water conservation program since the 1977 drought.

Metropolitan Water District board of directors voted to implement what amounts to a 10 percent reduction on all water service starting February 1. The goal is to reduce the demand on Metropolitan's supplies by about 260,000 acre-feet next year. An acre-foot of water is 326,000 gallons, about the amount used by two average families in and around the home in one year.

Metropolitan's member agencies will have to pay a substantial surcharge if they exceed their monthly quotas. Likewise they will be eligible for a rebate if they

Sheriff's Pancake Breakfast successful and enjoyable

The Lemon Grove Sheriff Station's "Breakfast with Santa" was an unqualified success, raising $1,400 for the community's needy families.

Hundreds of Lemon Grove residents enjoyed a breakfast, complete with pancakes, sausages, orange juice and more, Friday and Saturday at the Sheriff's station. Santa Claus was also there to greet children young and old, as well as McGruff the crime fighting dog.

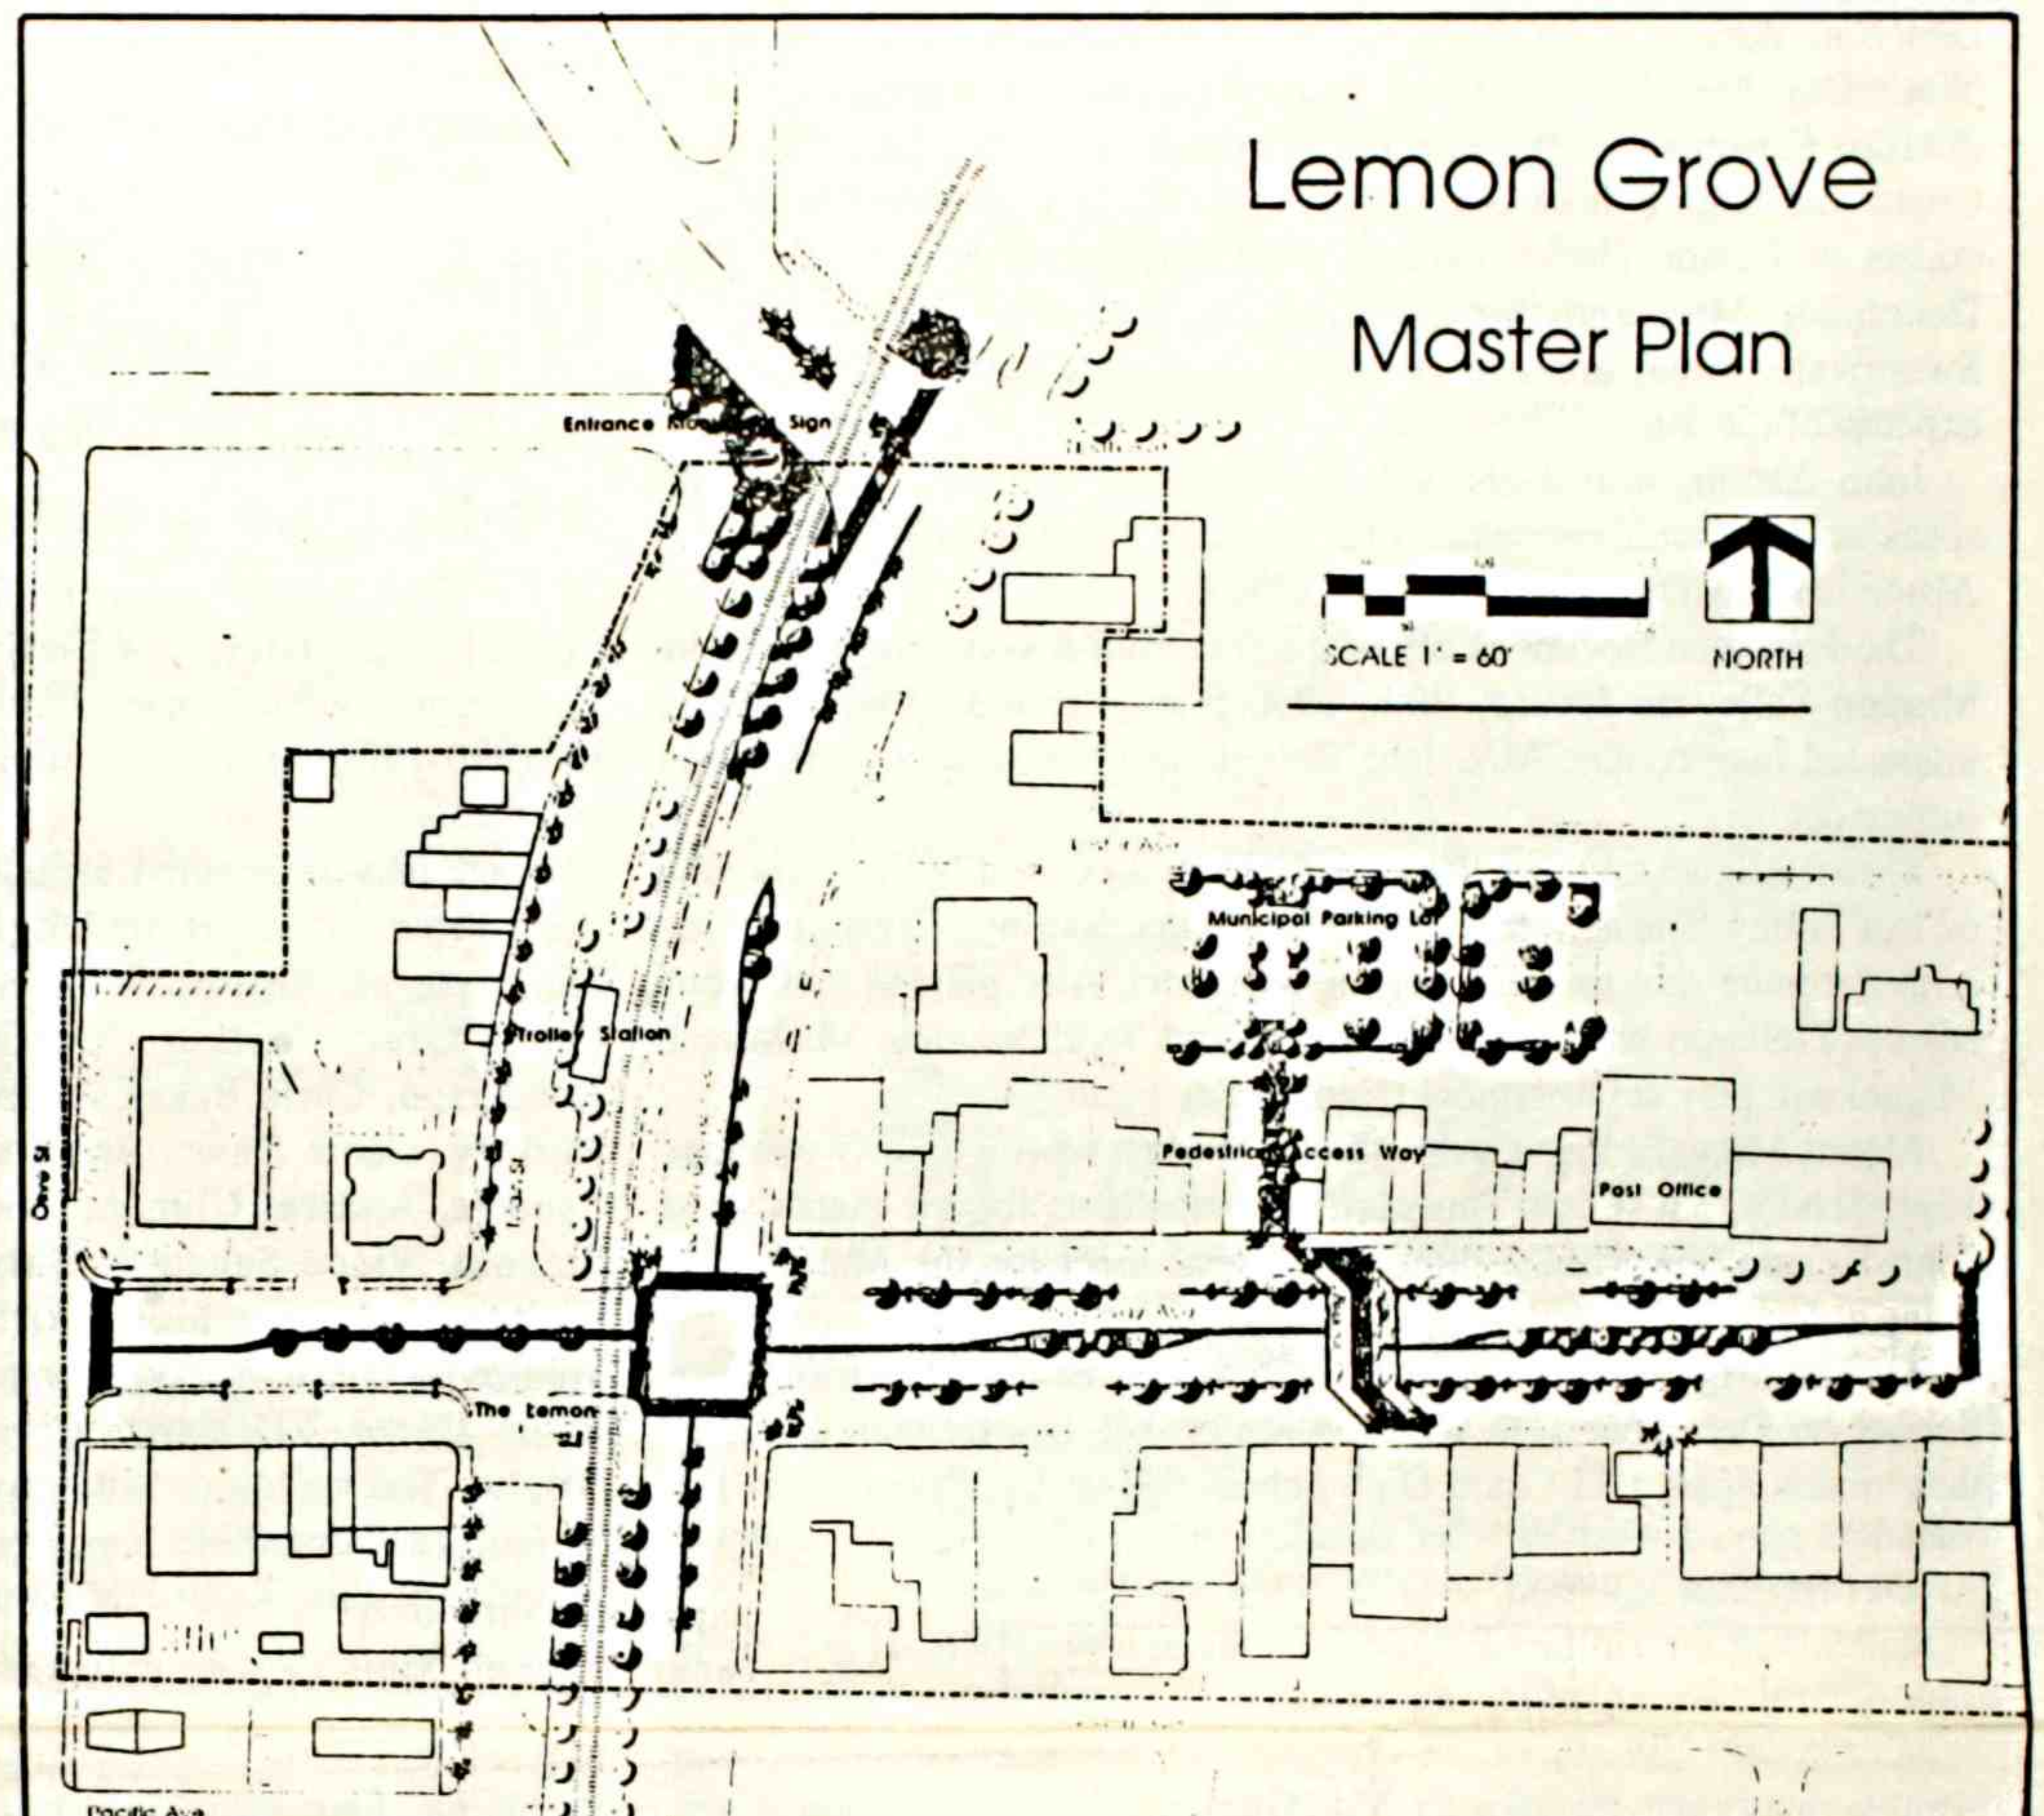

Lieutenant Lynne Ziegler attributes the success of the event to the tremendous support of the business community and to the commitment of the Sheriff's deputies who do all the cooking and serving. "Lemon Grove is a great place to work," she said. "Last year we made $500; this year, word got out and we were very well supported by everyone in the community. That's the key."

Ziegler said the deputies brought in two families from their patrol which will receive a complete Christmas-- food, toys, clothing--compliments of the Sheriff's station. One-third of the money will be given to the Adopt-A-Child program.

Council considers appeal to save Flower Barrel, reviews Downtown Master Plan

A public hearing to consider the fate of the Flower Barrel florist shop and a martial arts school in the 6900 block of Federal Boulevard dominated Monday night's City Council Meeting.

The shopping center in question was the subject of two previous plan development permit applications to renovate the entire shopping center, which included the addition of a new, two thousand square-foot building and the removal of the Flower Barrel florist shop which would be replaced by a six thousand square-foot building located approximately 25 feet south of the existing Flower Barrel building. The Flower Barrel building's removal was a requirement of the permit approval because a traffic study showed that the Flower Barrel building in its present location (immediately adjacent to the driveway and within two feet of the front property line) is a potential traffic hazard because it interferes with sight distance for vehicles entering and leaving through the adjacent driveway. A new tenant, George Wynn, would like to open a martial arts school in the shopping center at 6941 Federal Boulevard and City Staff feared that the increased traffic from the classes would aggravate the traffic problem.

Ruth Fleury, owner of the Flower Barrel, appealed the decision to remove her business, pointing out that there have been 31 accidents near the building in 30 years and none have been directly attributed to the Flower Barrel. She stressed the Flower Barrel's success and history in the community, adding, "All I'm asking is that you allow me to continue the business I've put my life into."

Reitha Canty, owner of D & R One Hour Martinizing located in the shopping center, spoke in defense of the Flower Barrel and the lack of traffic accidents caused by it. She said taking away a business wouldn't solve the shopping center's traffic problems and asked that some way be found for the Flower Barrel to stay and the martial arts studio to open.

The members of the City Council agreed that it was in the City's best interest to retain a successful business, such as the Flower Barrel and to encourage the opening of new businesses, such as the martial arts school. To this end, they voted to give the owner of the property, Phillip Morgan, an opportunity to come up with an alternative way to alleviate the traffic problem, as it was the traffic consultant hired by the owner that recommended the removal of the Flower Barrel. The public hearing was continued 60 days and will be resumed February 19th.

In other business, the City Council passed a resolution designating the intersection of Bonita Street and Mt. Vernon Street to be a four-way stop intersection.

Acting as the Redevelopment Agency, the Council heard a presentation by the firm of Van Dyke & Associates on the City's Downtown Master Plan. The master plan is to be carried out in three phases, with phase one being the improvement of the parking lot on Lester Avenue and the walk-through from the parking lot to Broadway. The second phase addresses aesthetic improvements such as the rebuilding and resurfacing of the parking strip on Broadway and landscaping the little medians between the parking strip and the street. The third phase extends the downtown landscape and streetscape theme north on Lemon Grove Avenue from Broadway and further east on Broadway to Olive Street, so that the center island area adjacent to the Lemon and the depot will be included.

B-Words

Personal comments of Councilman Bob Burns

In these days of gimmicks and trickery with the English language, we now have the "D" word which portends an economic depression. And of course, there is the "F" word which I will not explain, but I will plead guilty to a new designation that I call "B" words. Not only does the letter signify my initials, it is also designates my Post Office box (BB) here in Lemon Grove.

The first B-words are in appreciation for all, repeat, ALL of the holiday-minded residents of our little town who have decorated a fence or a tree in the front yard, or a TV antenna, or more splendidly, an entire house with Christmas lights. It is a practice that seems to really have come alive this year. There is hardly a single street that does not have some decoration that typifies and celebrates the holiday season. I especially appreciate the Nativity scenes that have sprung up, as well as the Santa Clauses, candy canes and life-size animals festooned with Christmas finery.

To my recollection, the Buttron family on Sheri Lane was the first to really go all-out with a Christmas decoration project, and it has grown to merit countywide attention. Wayne and Kathy portray Mr. and Mrs. Claus, and entertain a wide array of ages with their fantastic display of figures and lights.

Tom and Donna Clabby have spearheaded the residents of Angelus Street with similar displays to celebrate the Christmas season. Donna's generosity with the candy canes is 99 percent from the heart and one percent in an effort to preserve Tom's waist-

Just east of Skyline Drive on Mt. Vernon Street, you may see a life-sized bull Elk amid another large display of Christmas decorations. Many a double take has been necessary to see that he is not real.

West of the trolley, at Palm and San Miguel, there is a gigantic "Christmas tree" atop a house, courtesy of the TV antenna.

When you drive around Lemon Grove at night, it is obvious that the spirit of our Lord's birthday is alive and flourishing. Just south of Palm, on Washington, is one of the nicest Nativity scenes that I have seen outside of Balboa Park, and it saddens me to recall that we did once have a similar display in our plaza on Lemon Grove Avenue.

It seems that we owe a very large debt of gratitude to the residents who are gathering together to demonstrate our appreciation of the season. Let us hope that more will catch the fever each year, and that we will be a real showplace in the years to come. It really does not cost much, and it can be contagious from house to house and street to street.

The city officials and the staff of our small city, can only do so much within the confines of financial and civil rights limitations, but the private citizen, on his or her own property, can do much which is appreciated.

Councilman Burns has agreed to write a regular column for the Review addressing matters of concern to Lemon Grove and its citizens. If you have questions or comments for Dr. Burns, please send them to: P.O. Box BB, Lemon Grove, CA 91946.

conserve to levels below the targeted allocation. How this system of incentives and dis-incentives will affect the consumer is a decision to be made by local water agencies.

Metropolitan's General Manager Carl Boronkay advised the board that this may not be enough and additional conservation may also become necessary.

"Although it is not possible to forecast with any accuracy the magnitude of demand reduction measures that will ultimately be needed, the earlier that we implement additional conservation, the greater the ability to sustain deliveries during high-use periods of next summer," Boronkay said.

Metropolitan, which supplies nearly two-thirds of the region's water, has been told to expect a 25 percent reduction from its Colorado River supplies and a 15 percent shortage from water originating in northern California. Metropolitan this year will have imported about 1.2 million acre-feet of water through the Colorado River Aqueduct. But Bureau of Reclamation officials have told the district not to expect more than 940,000 acre-feet in 1991.

The State Water Project (SWP), which delivers water to Metropolitan through the California Aqueduct, is also indicating significant water shortages statewide. The first monthly forecast for the year's water supplies issued by the California Department of Water Resources predicts a 65 percent deficiency to agriculture and a 15 percent cut-back to urban areas. "The initial forecast also indicates that there is better than a 25 percent chance that additional SWP deficiencies will materialize in the upcoming year," Boronkay said. Additionally, the forecasts acknowledge that with continued dry conditions, runoff in the critical watershed could fall to all-time low levels.

Commentary

Two Christmases

by Paul Treske

There are two separate and distinct Christmases that are celebrated in our midst. They are in no way unique to modern times, but rather, age-old and a reflection of the world within which we live.

There is the Christmas of Joy. It is a holiday of hopes and blessings. Its trappings are lights and music and the sound of children's laughter. It is made of Santa Claus and gifts and the closeness of families sharing happiness together. Despite commercial inroads, it remains a hymn of joy dedicated to the birth of a child whose coming would answer "the hopes and fears of all the years." This Christmas is a good and wondrous time, when those who celebrate may truly trumpet "joy to the world."

The other Christmas is spent on mean and dark streets. If celebrated at all, it is greeted in temporary shelters or charitable dinners in churches and missions. It is spent in loneliness and despair and worse, sometimes, in drunkenness and death.

This is the Christmas that Dickens' ghosts of "Christmas Present" and "Christmas Future" showed Scrooge as he was led through back alleys of London on Christmas Eve. And this is the Christmas that will be endured by legions of our fellow men next week.

There is nothing wrong in celebrating richly, if we are able. And there is nothing wrong with reaching out at this time of year to "help the unfortunate" among us. What is wrong, is that we forget them when Christmas is over. What is wrong, is that we seem to have accepted the haggard faces and bundled bodies of our homeless and helpless as simply a part of life around us, a part that we think about mostly at Thanksgiving and Christmas.

As the Ghost of "Christmas Present" is about to leave Scrooge, he reveals from under his robe two wolfish, shriveled and ragged children. When Scrooge asks if they are his, the ghost replies, "They are man's... the boy is ignorance, the girl is want. Beware of them both, but most of all, beware of the boy, for on his brow I see that written which is doom..."

The world has not changed since then, but rather seems to have brought Dickens' words closer yet.

We have no magic, but we have the capacity to make human concern and betterment a year-round task. Our out-pouring of solicitude at Christmas must be spread throughout the year.

It is a monstrous job, but we can, even as volunteers, make a difference. No one of us can end hunger and need, but each of us can do something to help. We can volunteer our skills, time and a bit of our resources and in so doing, we can leave our mark. If one could help just one, what a blessing it would be.

As we read this, the two Christmases exist. The reaching out of hands now from one to another could be the beginning of "good will toward man."

From Where I Sit

by Frank Andrews

Have we almost lost the true meaning of Christmas? Santa Claus and his commercial realm have almost taken over completely.

How many of us really know that Christmas is the day that the little Christ child was born, and that we are supposed to celebrate His birthday each year at this time? Don't we realize what the birth of this Man has meant for all mankind? The Man that was tortured and then sacrificed His life for all people—then, now and forever. He was responsible for the writing of the book that has outsold all the best sellers in history put together (the Bible). A Man whose name has been mentioned daily more than any other man for the last 2,000 years (Jesus Christ).

Why is it that all our Christmas scenes depict pine trees with snow and reindeer? Don't we know that the place where the little Christ child was born was just an oasis in the desert, with palm trees, sand and camels? Ironically, as of this writing, nearly one-half million of the creme of the United States of America are waiting patiently for a war to erupt in this same historic area. Please God, bless them all, and bring them back to us safe and sound.

We have set aside a holiday for the birthdays of presidents, veterans, and now, Martin Luther King. Christ's birthday has been taken over by old Kris Kringle, whoever he was. It has become a day to remember our friends and relatives with expensive gifts, sometimes unwanted. Why wait until Christmas to "love thy neighbor?" Love him today.

If the people of our neighborhood, country, and entire world would observe the true Christmas, not Xmas, by giving our neighbors gifts of love and kindness, all our local and worldly problems could be solved.

Can you remember the last time you helped someone without any thoughts of being repaid? If you can, didn't it make you feel really good inside? What a wonderful, fruitful habit to get into!

God cared enough to send His very best (sounds like a Hallmark card commercial), Jesus Christ, his only begotten Son.

The True Christmas

Sports Commentary

by John E. Wirges

Swinging away, to a head start

Winter officially gets underway tomorrow, but snow, freezing rain and sleet raging in from the Gulf of Alaska, or roaring down the great Canadian plains have already made much of the country undrivable, uncomfortable and isolated.

Just in case you've forgotten, all over the North, Midwest and Eastern parts of the country, screens are down and storm windows are up. Long johns, heavy flannels, fur caps, fur-lined boots, parkas, two or three pairs of socks and several pairs of gloves are the uniform of the day. It's good to think about conditions like those once in a while. But, it's even better to get back to our own realities, like cheering for a little rain and enjoying the sunshine as it warms our fairways, highways and byways. As winter gently settles over our corner of Camelot, youngsters are getting ready for the first event on the 1991 Junior Golf tournament calendar.

The 37th annual Mike Vesock Junior Golf Tournament, the oldest event on the Junior Golf schedule, gets the "Tiny Tots" and "Tini-mights" away and swinging the day after Christmas at the United States Naval Training Center's Sail Ho golf course.

Sail Ho host pro Jack Dye and his crew have their modest little course in tournament playing condition and a request in to the Commanding Officer for sunny skies and warm breezes during the three days of the tournament.

The little guys and gals get the shindig started. Boys and girls in the ten and under division have an 8 a.m. tee-time, with the 11 and 12 age group following at 10:23 a.m.

Maria Falk, head starter for the ten and under crowd, is taking on triple duty in this year's Mike Vesock. She'll get the 156 players paired up in both age brackets and off and playing on Wednesday. Hilda Archibald will launch the 50 or so 13-14 age players on Thursday, and Maria returns to the starter's post for the 60-plus 15-17 age swingers on Friday. A loose count shows 270 young golfers kicking off the season in the Mike Vesock tournament. That's a pretty good size group of kids playing a grown-up game.

Golf is really a game for the entire family. Once a youngster reaches first grade and learns the basics of the game, they offer real competition to parents and grandparents on the executive-size courses on which they can score.

At Sail Ho and other junior golf size courses like Audry Walker's Sun Valley course in La Mesa, it's not unusual to see a foursome that includes a couple of kids in the 10-11 age group playing with their Mom (or Dad) and a grandparent.

On their own, the kids do a great job of learning the game and playing by all the rules. They play the ball as it lies, repair ball marks on the greens and observe golf courtesy rules.

The 950 or so San Diego Junior Golfing youngsters have about 24 tournaments to enjoy during the course of the year, including the Optimist Junior World Golf Tournament in July.

Learning to play golf in San Diego sure beats shoveling snow in Buffalo. For more Junior Golf information, call 280-8505 and tell 'em you wanna be a swinger.

Joe Freed on the Movies

This Week's movies: Edward Scissorhands and Havana

'Edward Scissorhands'

High above the garish world of pastel suburbia, looms the castle of an aged inventor. A truly brilliant man, the inventor dabbled in the design of an automated cookie factory, all the while, preparing to create his masterpiece - a son. Naming him Edward, the inventor tried to give the boy everything he would need to survive in the real world: clothes, intelligence, a heart. But, he tragically dies before he can change the razor-sharp scissors which serve as Edward's hands.

Fearing what his "handicap" might do to other people, and what they might do to him, Edward lives alone in the broken-down mansion. That is, until Peg, the Avon Lady, saves him.

That's not to say that everyone in the neighborhood wants Edward around. Peg's son only wants to take him to school for show-and-tell, neighbors find him freakish and the local jock wants to beat the snot out of him. Things pretty much get worse from there until everybody is out to get the hero.

Edward's introduction marks director Tim Burton's fourth venture into the bizarre, following "Batman," "Beetlejuice," and "Pee Wee's Big Adventure." It is Burton's most personal work, written by Caroline Thompson from Burton's most original idea, and it succeeds as an enjoyable fairytale - well, for the most part, anyway. The problem is, after Burton sets up this delightful relationship between Edward and the townsfolk, and then builds up to a huge climax, it seems like he did not know what to do next, and perhaps just took the easy way out. The ending doesn't seem at all natural.

The cast does a decent job, and the actors look as though starring in this fantasy was a jolly romp. Johnny Depp stars as Edward, and he's surprisingly good. Although buried under a two-hour makeup job, Depp is witty, with just a touch of boyish charm.

Co-starring as Peg's daughter Kim, is Winona Ryder, an actress I have occasionally been known to drool over, who is surprisingly dull as Edward's "love interest." As a true "sexist," I can say I didn't mind the poor quality of her role because I still like to look at her, but she really didn't have anything important to say. Academy Award winner Dianne Wiest and Alan Arkin are wonderful as the mild-mannered couple who bring Edward into their home, and Vincent Price graces the screen as the inventor. Look for a not-so-scrawny Anthony Michael Hall, again attempting a post-John Hughes comeback, but don't expect him to win any Oscars or to make another movie anytime soon.

Critics rating: B-

'Havana'

Sydney Pollack's first directorial work since the Academy Award-winning "Out of Africa," "Havana" is a moving romance, set against the backdrop of the 1958 Cuban revolution. Robert Redford stars as Jack Weil, an American con-artist who comes to Havana for its high-stakes poker. Against his better judgment, Weil is drawn into the lives of Bobby and Arturo Durán (Lena Olin, Raul Julia), an aristocratic revolutionary couple dedicated to the downfall of dictator Fulgencio Batista.

The acting is superb, with strong support by Alan Arkin as casino manager Joe Volpi, and the screenplay is tender and romantic. Pollack is an excellent director, although the film does drag a bit in the middle, and he handles the period with perfection.

Most incredible, however, is "Havana's" complex set design. The crew was forbidden to film inside Cuba, so production designer Terence Marsh literally rebuilt the streets of Havana in the Dominican Republic. The "big set" was a quarter-mile long street surrounded by casinos, restaurants and hotels. Exact replicas were built of the Floridita Bar, the El Encanto department store and the newspaper office, El Pais.

Critic's rating: B+

Junior Theatre to present 'Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat'

The Casa del Prado Theatre in Balboa Park will erupt with San Diego Junior Theatre's production of "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat," January 11 to 27.

Written by the team that brought us "Phantom of the Opera," and "Jesus Christ Superstar," "Joseph" is the dazzling journey of a boy and his eleven jealous siblings. Andrew Lloyd Webber and Tim Rice wrote the fast-paced musical when they were 17, to be performed by their classmates. Junior Theatre's production will be true to its original intention; youth performing for youth.

Featuring eclectic selections of musical styles including country and western, calypso, rock and roll and gospel, "Joseph" is colorful, energetic entertainment for the whole family. James Saba, director of last season's popular "A Midsummer Night's Dream," will return to create magic with this production.

Performances are Fridays, January 11, 18, and 25 at 7 p.m. and Saturdays and Sundays, January 12, 13, 19, 20, 26 and 27 at 2 p.m. Tickets are $5, $6 and $7 and are available by phone through the Junior Theatre Box office, Tuesday through Friday from 12:30 to 4:30 at 239-8355. The Box Office opens one and one-half hours before each performance. Tickets are also available through Arts/Tix. Discounts are offered to seniors and to groups of 15 or more. In support to those serving in Saudi Arabia, special discounts will be offered to military families.

San Diego Junior Theatre is a non-profit organization dedicated to providing San Diego's youth and the community with quality arts education.

Reynolds responds to slur against his alma mater

Dear Editor:

In his letter last week, Frank Smelik expressed his appreciation for the manner in which the Lemon Grove Planning Commission and staff worked cooperatively to resolve an obstacle to Mr. Smelik's request for approval of a lot split.

As a USC graduate, Mr. Smelik also noted with surprise that, although a Berkeley graduate, I was able to facilitate resolution as Commission chair.

It is always nice to hear from citizens who are pleased with the conduct of public officials. It is my experience that our city staff works hard to balance public and private interest in an open and cooperative manner. When applicants like Mr. Smelik respond in like manner, our tasks as Planning Commissioners are certainly made easier.

This instance was unusual only by the fact the Mr. Smelik rose above his educational deficiencies and actually suggested the compromise which resolved the issue at hand.

Letter asks Americans to remember and support its servicemen

Editor:

This message is for everyone back home. So many times in the past, the American public has lost interest in its county's causes.

I am asking now that you do not forget about the crisis here, in the Middle East, or your family members, friends and fellow Americans who have come to this region to meet the threat.

When we first arrived here, we were greatly outnumbered, but we came anyway; freely, knowing our duty. Now that the initial threat has diminished and the endless waiting and watching begins, I ask again, do not forget us or the sacrifices we have made or may yet make. We need your support. I promise you, we have not forgotten you!

Meisel attends national conference

Dr. Robert Meisel of Lemon Grove was one of over 2,000 doctors of optometry and other professionals in the eye care field from the United States and 15 foreign countries who attended the 1990 meeting of the American Academy of Optometry in Nashville, Tennessee.

The five-day meeting featured over 180 hours of educational seminars, workshops and lectures and over 400 original research papers on vision science.

Research papers dealing with laser technology, ultraviolet radiation, long-term contact lens wear and glaucoma were highlights of the combined research-educational meeting. Many of the advances introduced at previous Academy meetings have become accepted technology and procedure.

Founded in 1922, the American Academy of Optometry maintains and enhances excellence in optometric practice by fostering research and the dissemination of knowledge in vision science.

Fellowship in the Academy is a cherished and significant achievement held by only 10 percent of the optometrists in the United States and Canada. The 38,000-member professional organization promotes quality vision and eye care worldwide. It has members in the United States and 28 other countries.

Dr. Meisel has been a member of the American Academy of Optometry for 12 years.
